Main focus of submission

Submission in response to the Competition Commission's market inquiry into Data Services in South Africa in terms of Chapter 4A of the Competition Act No. 89 of 1998

We provide our submission with reference to the Guideline questions set out in the call for submissions. This submission is made on behalf of amandla.mobi an organisation with over 131,000 members, and the 44,726 people who signed their name in support of this submission.

9.2 For which specific data markets, products or services (whether for data services alone or a product that includes additional services) are prices high in South Africa? Please substantiate your response.

The Poor Pay many times more for data than the rich and fail to benefit from competition

In evaluating the extent to which prices are high, we would urge the Commission to consider the effective prices actually paid by consumers, especially the prices actually paid by consumers on average, low and very low incomes. Research ICT Africa provide high quality data on relative pricing in Africa based on comparing bundles of 1GB. While this is, in our view, a very useful indicator, we would strongly argue for considering other measures that take account of the practices of low income consumers and that consider in particular the pricing of small value data bundles and out of bundle prices which are the prices that particularly affect the poor.

Research conducted by researchers the Universities of Witwatersrand, Cape Town and Rhodes soon to be published by the highly regarded Institute of Development Studies in the United Kingdom[1] amongst low income consumers suggests that average and low income consumers are purchasing data in much smaller quantities that 1GB. It suggests that these consumers are buying data in quantities as low as 20MB to 30MB. Some of these consumers are using mobile data without buying data bundles.

It is our contention that low income consumers are paying disproportionately high charges and are not seeing benefits of competition in comparison to high income consumers who are able to buy larger quantities of data.

[1] The report, authored by de Lanerolle, Walton and Schoon, is due to be published in November. Please contact Indra de Lanerolle, Journalism and Media Studies Department University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, indra.delanerolle@wits.ac.za for further information or for copies of the report.

| Data bundle | Price (R) | Cost (R) per megabyte (MB) |
|---|---|---|
| 20MB, one day only | 5 | 0.25 |
| 250MB, one day only | 25 | 0.10 |
| 60MB, one week only | 12 | 0.20 |
| 500MB, one week only | 59 | 0.12 |
| 15MB, monthly | 10 | 0.66 |
| 100MB, monthly | 29 | 0.29 |
| 1GB monthly | 149 | 0.15 |
| Out of bundle (using airtime) | n/a | 1.50 |

As TABLE 1 shows, out of bundle prices are ten times higher than prices for 1GB and this in fact understates the problem. There is significant competition at the top of the market with promotional offers that offer higher income contract consumers data at 0.03c or less[3]. This means that those consumers who are using small data bundles or using data 'out of bundle' may be paying 50 times what richer consumers are paying.

9.3 In your view, what are the main causes for the higher prices for data services in South Africa? In your answer you could refer to probable causes such as cost issues, competition issues or regulatory issues. Please elaborate and provide any available evidence.

Why should the poor pay more for data than the rich?
The Commission should interrogate the relative costs of providing data in small quantities in comparison to the cost of providing data in larger quantities. As Pralahad (2006)[4] demonstrated, in the fast moving consumer goods sector (FMCG) 'sachet pricing' applies. Low income consumers purchase goods in much smaller quantities and pay a higher price per unit. In the FMCG sector, there are significant additional costs in production and distribution associated with providing goods in 'sachet' quantities. It is not clear that this applies at all in the case of data which, whatever the quantity of purchase, is distributed and serviced by the same production and distribution system. It should be for the mobile network operators to prove that a) they really do incur additional costs in providing data in small bundles and b) that these additional costs are in any way proportionate to the difference in pricing.

11. How do existing firms conduct themselves in the markets for the provision of data services, whether with respect to other firms (competitors or potential entrants) or with respect to their customers?

11.1. Are there firms that operate as monopolies at any level of the value chain for the provision of data services? Are there firms which have market power in any data market, service or product? Elaborate and provide examples.

This submission does not claim to be an expert regarding monopolies. However, a number of commentators have pointed to MTN and Vodacoms duopoly like behaviour:

https://mybroadband.co.za/news/cellular/114623-secret-vodacom-mtn-pricing-agreement-warning.html

https://techcentral.co.za/vodacom-mtn-at-war-with-consumers/62604/

We encourage the Competition Commission to consider the dominance of MTN and Vodacom as creating ripe conditions for possible collusion.

The market dominance of MTN and Vodacom has allowed them to keep the price of data high, while creating the illusion of competition through promotions that don't change the fact that they are making enormous profits without competing to keep the price of data down. This not only distorts competition within the sector, but because the digital economy is the future, by charging the poorest people the most for data, while giving the rich the cheapest data prices, MTN and Vodacom actual distort competition within the very fabric of our society, and in doing so entrench gross inequality in South Africa, compromising our future. We call on you to ensure networks notify pre-paid users when their bundles are about to run out, and to ensure consumers opt in to out-of-bundle rates which are exorbitant, ensure networks are transparent about their profits, and desegregate their profits from voice, SMS and data both in and out-of-bundle. We further call on you to ensure networks send notifications to consumers, no matter how small their bundles, to warn them when their bundle is about to run out and for a 50% cut in the cost of data for those who pay the most for data, the poor.

11.2. Across the value chain for data services, are there any firms that engage in any conduct that could be seen as unfair or anti-competitive? Please elaborate and provide examples.

Out of bundle pricing is untransparent and unfair for low income consumers
The evidence we have presented suggests that the major operators are engaging in conduct that is unfair and anticompetitive in respect of low income consumers. De Lanerolle, Walton and Schoon's research suggests that low income consumers are buying data bundles in the range of R2-R20. Low income consumers who are generally buying airtime and data in very small quantities are particularly susceptible to unintentionally going 'out of bundle'.

Vodacom's recently published quarterly results state that, for pre-paid customers in South Africa (which is to say the vast majority of customers) three quarters of Vodacom's income from voice and data came at 'out of bundle' rates. For data this means customers were likely to be paying R1.50 per MB or R1,500 ($115) per GB.

The automatic transition from in bundle to out of bundle pricing without enabling the consumer to choose whether they wish to continue to use data at prices up to 50 times higher is unfair and exploitative - especially of the poor.

For competition to thrive, we need a diverse economy driven by entrepreneurs. The internet is a powerful tool for all entrepreneurs to promote their produce or service, and leverage efficiencies of the digital age. However, because data prices are structured so those with the least income pay the most for data, entrepreneurs from an upper-class background have an unfair advantage getting their enterprise off the ground.

Key requests of remedial actions we ask the Commission to investigate
We ask the Commission to request that the mobile network operators provide information on on the share of their revenues that come from out of bundle data.

We ask the Commission to consider eliminating out of bundle pricing altogether.

We ask the Commission to consider whether the relative pricing of small and large bundles are legitimate on grounds of costs of sale, distribution or production.

We ask the Commission to consider proposing that mobile operators be forced to provide consumers with the choice of whether to continue to use data at out of bundle prices when their data bundles expire or run out.

Tell the Competition Commission why Data Must Fall

We demanded Data Must Fall, and now government has instructed the Competition Commission to conduct an inquiry into the cost of data. If enough of us make submissions, the Competition Commission will have no choice but to force the likes of MTN and Vodacom to stop ripping us off.

To the Competition Commission of South Africa

We demand that the price of data is reduced. Telecommunications companies are currently overcharging for data, which disproportionately affects low income earners. Despite not incurring extra costs to provide data out-of-bundle, network providers are charging those who use these and smaller bundles exorbitant rates. Vodacom currently charges R2 per megabyte for out-of-bundle data, while MTN charged 99 cents, Cell C R1.10 and Telkom 29 cents. Yet Vodacom, Telkom and Cell C users who bought a 100 megabyte data bundle would pay just 29 cents and MTN users 35 cents per megabyte. Buying bigger bundles lowers the cost even more drastically, reducing the cost to as little as five and six cents per megabyte.

The market dominance of MTN and Vodacom has allowed them to keep the price of data high, while creating the illusion of competition through promotions that don't change the fact that they are making enormous profits. This not only distorts competition within the sector, but because the digital economy is the future, by charging the poorest people the most for data, while giving the rich the cheapest data prices, MTN and Vodacom actual distort competition within the very fabric of our society, and in doing so entrench gross inequality. We call on you to ensure networks notify pre-paid users when their bundles are about to run out, and to ensure consumers opt in to out-of-bundle rates which are exorbitant. We call on you to demand networks are transparent about their profits, and desegregate their profits from voice, SMS and data both in and out-of-bundle. We further call on you to ensure networks send notifications to consumers, no matter how small their bundles, to warn them when their bundle is about to run out and for a 50% cut in the cost of data for those who pay the most for data, the poor.

| 63. | Ashlene Pingelly | Dear Competition Commission, I spend anything from R200 and upwards on data per month. At times I have to work after hours or work from home and I need data for this. The prepaid data (1 G) for vodacom is R149 - This has forced me to take out a contract, which I dont really want, as I am then locked into this deal for 2 years. Further, simple things such as accessing news websites for research or just being informed becomes problematic as well. |
| 64. | innocentia motsweni | Cheaper n affordable data |
| 65. | Kingsley Sithonga | Please keep in mind that the country is in various troubles and customers winning this battle will be a step toward solving them |

| 67. | Sandile Nkosi | Data definitely needs to fall, think of that rural child in high school who needs to do a project for school and can only use mobile phone for the internet. We need affordable data bundles for such usage. |
| 68. | Paula Luiz | |
| 69. | Jacob Loubser | data must fall |
| 70. | Genevieve Black | |
| 71. | Kerry van Schalkwyk | It is a fundamental right that data is accessible to everyone but this is currently not possible with the huge data prices we are forced to pay!!! Data prices must come down!!! |
| 72. | Hermien Kotze | Make South Africa affordable ! |
| 73. | Wanda Maseko | With low cost data we will be assisting schoolars withouth infrastucture to acsess aedium to ne able to reseach and communicate with the whole world as such as it should be readily available to every soith african in both urban and rural this bu cirbing the cost we are paving a future for every child |
| 74. | Abe Mosiuoa | Data must fall and it must fall now. Our second step will be to campaign for the airtime that gets to be forfeited by cellphone contract holders every new month. Amandla! |
| 75. | David Ramokhele | It is honestly and simply unaffordable. In this day and age information is a basic need and the internet is the best source of information. Internet should be as cheap as water. |

| 83. | Sandile Mjwara | We request that data cost must fall, not cut because the way its expensive it is way too unaffordable for most of us especially the youth of South Africa who don't work but use it as means of job search and communication, and compared to other countries , South Africa is way too expensive in data costs hence this does not benefit the citizens but only those who are wealth living already. Its not fair when you compare data costs to other countries, are we the highest rich country, or is it because unemployment rate in South Africa is low, NO. This is insane and crazy. South African employment rate is even higher and a disappointing shame. Even if it was better why are we the mostly charged country. So it has to be equal to other countries on currency price. Otherwise the use of internet should be banned and rejected by citizens. This has to STOP, and now. |
| 84. | Du-Aine Dunston | Please let data be cheaper |
| 85. | Andrew Greathead | As an IT professional, the reality is that data doesn't expire - it's not food with a sell-by date. Providers sell us data bundles which grant us access to their network. We pay upfront for this promise to use the network, so it's impossible and illogical that |

The high prices of data are prohibiting the majority of the lower income rate from acquiring information, in its various forms. If the majority of people affected are the poor, these exorbitant prices are encouraging the already large gap between the rich and the poor, keeping these prices as they are will be going against the what the government claims to want to close. and thus there will continue being economic injustices in a land destined for freedom and financial security for those who are said to be poor. |

Our population needs the internet to conduct business and especially the small businesses and farmers. Their smartphones are in most cases their only means of communicating online. There are so many studies that shows how other African countries and other developing countries are using access to the www to grow their small businesses. It is high time that we in SA (read: Govt) change our situation so that our economy can perform much better. |

| 245. | Peter Barthel | Peter Barthel |
| 246. | Liani Pretorius | We demand that the price of data is reduced. Telecommunications companies are currently overcharging for data, which disproportionately affects low income earners. Despite not incurring extra costs to provide data out-of-bundle, network providers are charging those who use these and smaller bundles exorbitant rates. Vodacom currently charges R2 per megabyte for out-of-bundle data, while MTN charged 99 cents, Cell C R1.10 and Telkom 29 cents. Yet Vodacom, Telkom and Cell C users who bought a 100 megabyte data bundle would pay just 29 cents and MTN users 35 cents per megabyte. Buying bigger bundles lowers the cost even more drastically, reducing the cost to as little as five and six cents per megabyte. The market dominance of MTN and Vodacom has allowed them to keep the price of data high, while creating the illusion of competition through promotions that don't change the fact that they are making enormous profits. This not only distorts competition within the sector, but because the digital economy is the future, by charging the poorest people the most for data, while giving the rich the cheapest data prices, MTN and Vodacom actual distort competition within the very fabric of our society, and in doing so entrench gross inequality. We call on you to ensure networks notify pre-paid users when their bundles are about to run out, and to ensure consumers opt in to out-of-bundle rates which are exorbitant. We call on you to demand networks are transparent about their profits, and desegregate their profits from voice, SMS and data both in and out-of-bundle. We further call on you to ensure networks send notifications to consumers, no matter how small their bundles, to warn them when their bundle is about to run out and for a 50% cut in the cost of data for those who pay the most for data, the poor. |

What about the fact that I paid R249 for 2GB of Vodacom data and now pay R250 for 5GB through FNB? That tells me that Vodacom and MTN are inflating their prices. People on prepaid cell/data sim cards pay much more for add on data bundles than subscribers on post paid contracts. But these are the people who can't afford to pay for a post paid contract, which again, says to me that the service providers are milking the poorer people! Data contracts should cost the same regardless and instead of using cheaper add on data bundles for account holders, the service providers should rather provide free data or something else. As far as I am concerned, the cost of add on data bundles being higher for the prepaid users, especially when considering the demographics, is a case of service providers dipping their toes into a grey area of ethic business practice. |

With Information being at the centre of the current industrialization, the high costs of data/communication/information means that some are just excluded from the stream of industrialization. 2. Network Service providers seem are to an extent exploiting users in the sense that you are forced to purchase a product/ Data/ Airtime. They exploitation part is where they are forcing the rate at which you must use your own data by enforcing unreasonable expiry periods for data. 3. when you run out of data, the charges automatically runs over to the airtime and the charges thereon are even worse. This whole system is kind of a trap for the consumers |

| 283. | Stephanie Wium | Good day I recently traveled to Mozambique for 2 weeks. At the border I purchased a Vodacom sim card and loaded it with 2.5GB of data. This I purchased for a ridiculous amount of R55. My question is this: In a neighbouring country data is cheaper than in South Africa where Vodacom has a much larger footprint, how is this even possible? Not only was the data cheaper but the rate of usage was longer as well. I tried my level best to use up 2.5GB of data in the 2 weeks, but it was just not possible. The same amount of data used in South Africa does not even last me 1 week. I visit the same websites and download the same amount of videos, etc. It's very disheartening to have to compare to a country such as Mozambique. Four out of the 5 complaints, MTN accepted responsibility for overcharging me and credited me. The last claim was again unexplained data charges in May 2017 which I queried as I had a substantial amount of data due to a contract upgrade in April 2017. MTN again dragged out the matter until I again had to bring ICASA on board. The response from MTN was it could have been due to data used out of bundle at the time their billing cycle closed on a previous month. I then advised them that surely that should then be specified as such on the invoice and I want documented proof not possible scenarios. They offered to send me itemized billing but said I'll have to pay for it. I told them that they need to justify the charges to |

| 292. | Faizel Petersen | me so why should I pay for it. They then offered to send me my URL report, I said that I know which websites and applications I use so don't need a URL report, I need proof to justify the charges. They then eventually sent an excel document that looks like an itemized bill. It being an excel document means there's opportunity to edit the content before sending it to me. That was it for me. If it wasn't for the recent cellphone upgrade I would've preferred to use a prepaid sim card from another network as MTN are not ethical and I simply don't trust them anymore. Their out of bundle rates are ridiculously high and data is depleted rapidly. I've already deactivated auto updates, I've manually disabled all apps from running in the background and activated my "data save " mode yet MTN keeps referring to those items as the reason my data is depleted so rapidly. This therefore proves to me that they are lying to me and possibly millions of other customers making b easy money off us. This corrupt practices must stop and I feel there must be pressure put on mobile networks to drop data rates all together. |

It would also be great to let us utilise our sourced / purchased data at our own pace, meaning that data not used for a month or several days must roll over and be accessible when I do find the need to use it. Night owl time frames should also be looked into, consider starting time at 22h00 or 23h00 and close at 06h00 for Vodacom |

Frantz Fanon was right when he said: "A society that drives its members to desperate measures is a society to be replaced" and now, because we have become desperate we begin to contemplate... I cannot even begin to explain how much I have suffered because of the high price of data and disappearing data (Vodacom) and I am not the only one. It takes money to make money and that is fine but do not be surprised when the carpet gets pulled out from underneath everyone because the daily lives of poor people have become unbearable in this skewed society that claims to have the interests of the poor at heart but in reality only caters for the wealthy. I am not sure that you understand, or perhaps you have forgotten, but I tell you now; if you keep filling us with rage and retribution and you keep taking away our ability for equal opportunity (which I am sure is supposed to have something to do with 'Democracy') then fine, so be it, but do not claim to care about us and do not expect us to smile while you place the shackles on our lives. |

R8.50 gets you 50 mb data for 1 day ..whilst R10 gets you 50 mb weekly (which actually lasts less than a day without even downloading things or visiting instagram at all or Facebook frequently ).so when you only have an R8.50 ,its the same as buying the weekly bundle ,but you're paying so high a price for something that will finish in a day . I'll often find myself in a situation where I buy airtime 3-4 days a week for the R10 50 mb "Weekly" bundle because it's only what I can afford at the moment & because it runs out so quick , the only way the data could remain for a week is if u don't use it . |

I can't participate on discussions because most of the time my expensive data gets depleted quickly. Spending R149 to purchase 1 gig or R249 for 2 gig for my cell. Then again more for Voda Wifi router we spend more money on data than we should. What will happen when they sell in TB if GB are already expensive? I sell goods via whatsapp to customers after work but most of the time I can't reach them because data is depleted. I am Tax paying citizen in this country & would like to do e-filing but I can't . I also cannot take a day off work to spend it at SARS. I have children who rely on data to do their research. The reduction of costs means I will be able to do more to better my life,my children. | 881. | Sharone Daniels | already we as the working class spend most of our money on food, electricty and traveling expense to and from work. Somethings have to change and data cost has to be reduced so that we as the poor have a chance to advance. Our children need the internet but can only access it at libraries when its open. Why should the rich always have an adnvatage over the poor? How do we build an inclusive and prosperious cuuntry when the price of data is too high? Reduce data cost Now! |
| 882. | Diphale Sekukuni | 1.The price of data must be tremendously reduced. I travel all over the world nd the prices of data sold to the South African people is DAYLIGHT ROBBERY! 2.Data bought must be used UNTIL it is DEPLETED! Not expired. Why should money expire? This shows that the people are being taken advantage of, and being robbed of their meagre salaried purchases. 3. The lowest amount of data bought, should not have different terms and conditions as compared to the high amount. After all datais data, regardless of the amount of megabyte or gigs purchased. 4.Our data bundles should stop disappearing. 5.Prepaid and contract data should have the same usage. At the moment prepaid customers pay a lot for the same usage as the contract customers. This shows discrimination of the low income population, who mostly buy prepaid. So, the rich have more privileges and the poor are sqeeezed off their hard earned cash. 6.Surfing the net and downloading items should not cost us an arm and a leg. Most of us, more especially students, majority from poor families, use the internet for research to improve our qualifications. 7.The issue of paying for exhorbitant roaming rates within the African continent should come to an end. MTN in South Africa is still MTN in Ghana nd Nigeria. Why charge us diferent rates. Why must there be a need to roam within one continent, using the same network, owned by the same company? This is ridiculous, greed. |

I recommend 1 gig must be ten (10) rands with no expiry dates. fair price. |

| 971. | Tekane Mopeli | Once again, our government and its statutory bodies continue to perpetuate the state of economic inequality by not coming up with legislations that benefit the previously disadvantaged population of our country. Internet connection in rural areas (where you found previously disadvantaged in majority) is not only horrible, but it's also expensive. Our people there resolve into using local internet cafes, which are equally expensive (R7.00 for 15 minutes of internet access). The businesses have moral responsibility to grow economy and connect our people, what is happening now in South Africa is class discrimination, and it's very disappointing to see a government of the people continuing to be oblivious while the rights of majority of voters are being violated day in, day out. It's no longer a point of discussion that the data costs in South Africa are ridiculously high, but nothing has been done to date. Those who can afford still gets better deals, the more you can afford the cheaper the rates, that's how mobile operators' deals are structured. A good marketing tool perhaps, but what about our poor people? There sooner the data rates fall, the better. The exorbitant prices are also hindering economic growth. Enough is enough! Amandla!!!! |

| 985. | Glenn Ashton | I view the manner in which cellphone companies invalidate unused data as outright theft. The unilateral nullification of data by these companies deprives me of the right to use an item that I have purchased, in good faith. To rescind this under some arcane small print rider is unacceptable. Given the already high costs of data, the unilateral alienation of this property further drives up costs. I would think that these actions run counter to, if not the letter, then the intentions of the CPA. If this nation is to be competitive we cannnot be held ransom by a predatory cellphone communications sector that stymie growth in the interests of their bottom line. I feel a test case ought to be taken against these companies, as a class action suit, to challenge their right to steal our unused data from us. I would think it likely to succeed if another solution is not arrived at which deals with this anti public interest cartel activity - after all every single cell company engages in this practice. |
| 986. | Catharina Minervini | The world has reached the stage where virtually no meaningful business or public activity can take place without widespread access to the internet. Any country that allows that access to be hindered by unjustifiably high prices is slowly slitting its own throat. South Africa needs cheaper data and it needs the industry supplying it to be free from profiteering and collusion. Please help make this happen. Catharina Minervini |
| 987. | Michael Schmidt | It is clear that in the world's most unequal society, the unusually high costs of data primarily deprive the poor of many electronic means of accessing services and other needs. |

| 998. | Quinton Koekemoer | Data is extremely expensive. And we use data in a day to day basis. Paying as much as we do is insane. |
| 999. | David Larsen | I believe giving universal access to data is a fundamental development need for all citizens in South Africa. Like basic infrastructure such as highways it serves as a fundamental infrastructural backbone upon which a healthy and sustainable economy can be built. The continuation of a situation where some have access and others do not simply entrenches the inequalities in our society and the digital divide and relegates large parts of our population to the edges of what is increasingly a digital global economy. |

I then have to top up 2G or more and end up adding R360 toR540 of data a month on top of contract amount of R542. The worst is I don't even have the top of the range phone. I need data as I'm part of essential workforce and work from Monday to Friday and need to access emails and to communicate via wats'app as I'm not allowed to answer my phone in Public view unless it is my tea break or lunch break.By the way I'm a MTN subscriber |

They charge us a lot of money for the data we buy and when it is finished they take money off our airtime without our consent for data while we are roaming. There is no notification that your data is incomplete while you are roaming |

| 1067. | John Pickford | communications.. ?! How can a purchased product that has an infinite lifespan have an expiry?!?! How can networks charge us for, say, a weekly bundle when the week is often not even available.. reneging on the deal by having no network service.. sometimes up to 2 days within each week! That's NOT a weekly bundle! Everytime I put airtime onto my phone, within days it depletes FOR NO REASON.. I have no background apps running..I've had it checked by MTN care service and many MTN shops to no avail.. the same thing happens on my dongle, which ALSO has NO background running apps.. This amounts to THEFT, plainly and clearly.. Yet, where does one seek any form of justice.. I have complained and phoned til i'm blue in the face.. they just do nothing.. I am also appalled by the costs of data in South Africa! It is unforgiveable given the fact that we were so lured by the 2010 World Cup, supposed to be there with the world, live video-streaming available to all.. and yet only now, 2017, cities have mostly acquired fibre-optic!! What have we been paying off for so long when the services haven't actually been fully available or improved? How about some focus on the rural services.. |

There is no reason for data to be as expensive as it is - with more people using internet every day, does it not make sense that data costs world lower with the increase of people needing it? |
| 1076. | Lindiwe Khoza | It is very unfortunate that one cannot function without data nowadays... Using communication apps used to be cheaper than phone calls, but now phone calls are way better than apps...research on the internet is much quicker than going to the library and reading books... Please Vodacom, MTN & CELL C, lower your prices of data... |

| 1079. | Samantha Jack | The high prices of data is hampering the development of our country and our people. How can our country compete properly with other nations when our data is so overpriced? How can we develop technology and innovation that solve South African problems when the data prices exclude the poor? How can our children access the internet for school projects and learn about the world when they are unfairly disadvantaged? How can young adults apply for universities and technikons if they can't afford data? This greediness of our cellphone companies must stop. |

| 1088. | Dudu Radebe | Please support our call to reduce the cost of data. In this age of technological advancements, this is not a luxury, but has become a necessity for many South Africans to access information and communicate channels. Current data costs take from the poor to benefit the rich, this practice is unjust and exploitative! Force MTN, Vodacom, Cell C, Telkom to drop data costs, sooner than later. |

| 1100. | Zoheb Khan | Ongoing longitudinal research (the Siyakha Youth Assets study) by myself and colleagues at the Centre for Social Development in Africa (UJ) (see baseline report at https://www.uj.ac.za/faculties/humanities/csda/Pages/Research-Reports.aspx) shows that unemployed young people consistently spend more than R900 per month on average looking for work. A substantial portion of this is spent on data. This in a context where per capita household income is around R550 per month on average, and food insecurity and hunger are rife. Our youth - and the households they live in - are effectively starving in order to pay for job search, which is extremely difficult without access to data. The extraordinary data pricing practices in this country therefore represent egregious, wanton exploitation that we have a moral duty to put an end to. We should conceive of access to data and information as a human right - it is not a want or a privilege but an absolute necessity in order to be a functioning member of society. More than this, it is clear that inordinately expensive data directly contributes to and exacerbates poverty and unemployment, and this is a status quo that I sincerely hope the Commission will help us to change. | 1109. | Chris Kleynhans | meant that CSP started to shape apps to benefit themselves. Then the expiry of data is of course a very important issue. But the cost is also far to high. For instance, YouTube is a video streaming service that now carries lots of high quality educational videos that can be used by kids to improve their education when teachers are not up to it. But how do young people, pupils and students get access to YouTube if data is so unaffordable and speed and reception so bad. There are also standard for voice quality and I think most6 CSP's uses a very low standard and it is not always easy to hear what people are saying. Whatsapp for instance use a much higher quality throughput and quality for voice, why cant the CSP's do the same. Because ICASA spends too much of their time drinking coffee. If I can see it, then they should be way better. ...It will be an excellent idea to extend data periods to 24 months and it may even triggers higher data sales because we won't need to sit on the edge of our seats and carefully manage our data every month and keep on running out. Please, we talk of White Monopoly Capital, these CSP's are the worst kind of monopoly created by the state. It can't carry on like this. Cheap and available data may become an important stimulant to trigger this economy. The state is standing in the way of most entrepreneural processes by overregulation for the small guy and protection to the monopolies. Let us fix this. We want to bring them projects to expose them to things their peers in urban areas are exposed to, but data is a challenge. Their parents don't earn much and being an NPO, we can't afford to subsidize them. Data expiring and your airtime bring depleted because Vodacom doesn't consistently alert its users is a big cheat and exploits those who can't afford to buy more. Data Must Fall. |
| 1336. | Yolanda Mpalweni | |
| 1337. | Kediemetse Mahome | |
| 1338. | Fortune Sibanda | #DataMustFall, two important considerations: (1) the Internet as an enabler of our basic right to communicate (freedom of expression) - share and impart ideas, must be viewed as a basic human right. Be part of history by enabling South Africans realise their right communicate. (2) the internet contributes almost 3% of South Africa's GDP, this could be more, if we do more. Unlocking this crucial tool of communication could unlock millions of Rand more in economic value, enabling big industries to produce more (even the Vodacoms and MTNs of this world will benefit 10x in the medium to long term), government to be more connected to its citizens, and the poor being finally able to truly participate in the mainstream economy, get jobs, innovate and employ others and be informed. Now if this does not make a case for #DataMustFall, then I don't what will. Siyabonga |

| 1384. | Lindiwe Ntuli | To the Competition Commission of South Africa We demand that the price of data is reduced. Telecommunications companies are currently overcharging for data, which disproportionately affects low income earners. Despite not incurring extra costs to provide data out-of-bundle, network providers are charging those who use these and smaller bundles exorbitant rates. Vodacom currently charges R2 per megabyte for |

|---|---|---|
| | | out-of-bundle data, while MTN charged 99 cents, Cell C R1.10 and Telkom 29 cents. Yet Vodacom, Telkom and Cell C users who bought a 100 megabyte data bundle would pay just 29 cents and MTN users 35 cents per megabyte. Buying bigger bundles lowers the cost even more drastically, reducing the cost to as little as five and six cents per megabyte. The market dominance of MTN and Vodacom has allowed them to keep the price of data high, while creating the illusion of competition through promotions that don't change the fact that they are making enormous profits. This not only distorts competition within the sector, but because the digital economy is the future, by charging the poorest people the most for data, while giving the rich the cheapest data prices, MTN and Vodacom actual distort competition within the very fabric of our society, and in doing so entrench gross inequality. We call on you to ensure networks notify pre-paid users when their bundles are about to run out, and to ensure consumers opt in to out-of-bundle rates which are exorbitant. We call on you to demand networks are transparent about their profits, and desegregate their profits from voice, SMS and data both in and out-of-bundle. We further call on you to ensure networks send notifications to consumers, no matter how small their bundles, to warn them when their bundle is about to run out and for a 50% cut in the cost of data for those who pay the most for data, the poor. |

To: MTN, Vodacom, Telkom, Cell C, Dept of Communications, ICASA and the Competition Commission

We the people and consumers of Mzansi are tired of being ripped off by mobile networks. We demand a cut in the cost of data by at least 50% before the 31st December 2017, and for an end to data, airtime and SMS bundles expiring after 30 days. We call on the ICASA, the Portfolio Committee on Telecommunications and Postal Services, the Competition Commission and the National Assembly to force mobile networks to adhere to this demand.

We also note the network coverage advantage MTN and Vodacom have over other networks and the duopoly this allows. We demand that we not be held at ransom because of this. If you fail to act, we will as consumers and citizens use our collective power to take this directly to the National Assembly for Members of Parliament to hear us.

| M | Mpshe | Gauteng | Most of the people in South Africa are underprivileged and being able to have data on their phones it's a necessity and not a luxury as it forms part of our daily lives including being able to perform their school work to the best of their ability sincewell education requires a lot of research in order to complete the daily tasks/homework required on a daily basis. |

It is too expensive. I find it hard to keep up. I am a Btech student so I research a lot. How else am I supposed to find information when I need money to use my phone to search for a job so I can make mone? #KuBad |

| calvin | sepadi | Gauteng | I signed up for this because just last year, I've realized that monthly I go through about 5GB of data at R399 for all the research and development that I do. Everything I need (i.e. Banking, Shopping, TV, News, Job Applications,Travel etc) is online. It will only make sense for data to be cheaper and accessible for all as the high prices impede on an individuals day-to-day life. These network providers have been scheming off South Africans far too long and we are tired |

| Heath | White | Gauteng | Access to information is an uplifter and leveller. Mobile service providers charge iniquitous rates that are contributing to South Africa's fall down the world development ladder. We have the second worst internet on the African continent -- only Eritrea has worse internet that we do, and that's because the government doesn't allow the internet. Shame on all those involved in this scalping and repression of the South African people. |

| Giulietta | Fafak | Western Cape | I makes me mad when commentators talk of the marvels of the digital age and all the great information and resources that are available to us in the 21st century – for most people in South Africa these offerings are not accessible. Data here is way too expensive. Its cost is holding back potentially positive economic developments, like young entrepreneurs, for one thing. |

| Asandile | Mathamo | Eastern Cape | I'm a health professional working in a public sector, I use internet a lot to retrieve my patients laboratory results which helps with faster, convenient and efficient services.....if I run out of data which blows up very fast, the patients are forced to wait for laboratory to deliver manually, with resultant unnecessary delay in management and final decision making about the patient and that indirectly increases waiting times in our public health facilities |

| Kojo | Arthur | Gauteng | In my opinion access to the internet in the 21st century is a basic human right. How can people therefore exercise that basic right if the telecommunications companies prevent them from doing so through unreasonable and excessive data costs, more so in a developing country such as South Africa. It is therefore important that access to the internet in South Africa is advanced through reduced and sensibly priced data. |

| Modisagaarekwe | Moncho | North West | The poorest of the poor in rural areas they have access to crucial information , simply because they don't money to by data . When you compare R22 with R155 you will find that the is a huge difference , meaning that our data in this country is too expensive compare to other countries . People around rural areas they can't affort because unlike those in SANDTON , they are the poorest of the poor . Down with exorbitant prices of data !!! |

| Bee | Sogobile | Western Cape | I fully support the Data Must Fall campaign, because a lot of us young people are not able to have full access to the internet, without the actual data depleting within a day! which then consumes most of our pocket monies by buying more gigs of data to have full access to internet. If prices could decrease, at least there will be a huge difference in our country! |

| Belinda | Eagleton | Eastern Cape | Your info is incorrect. I went to Nam in Aug & its NOT R23 for 1GB. Data in nam is very expensive, it's R79 for 420mbs & charge Tax on airtime. Also airtime/data runs out super quickly in Namibia. You can getpackages data for cheap. mtn R89 for 1 GB. Telkom data for cheap & where you can connect to free wifi, Afrihost 250mbs of data for R1 every month.Axxess is also a partner with mtn R495 for 10Gbs It carries ocer for 3 months. |

| Bright | Manganye | Gauteng | Data is too expensive, I can't do my school work properly because data gets finished quickly. Spend lots of money on data and it doesn't even last. |
| Mareka | Monyokolo | | End the digital divide, as well as the greed that characterize our mobile telephony service providers. Further, to pressure the toothless ICASA and the Communication Department to do their work, i.e. ensure universal access to ICT and protect and promote our interests in this regard! |

| Carl | Johnson | Gauteng | government is to blame by not implementing the digital migration of television which has kept the spectrum for data transmission small, slow and expensive. The likes of MTN and Vodacom are just cashing in. The examples of the cost of data in other countries is not accurately expressed in that there is also so much free access in places of public gathering and institutions in many developed and developing countries your require,net for personal data airtime is actually very small. |

| Ebrahim | Mathee | Western Cape | Data costs are way to high! As a student I use my phone most of the time to search for things and I cannot afford to keep on buying data as it is very expensive. I am not always able to get to a computer to search for information. This needs to change because there are many South Africans who rely on the use of data daily to get information and search for jobs. |

| Masego | Modisane | Gauteng | I have a lot of assignments and schoolwork to do that requires hardcore research and the Internet does help a lot, however the amount of data I have to buy to last me for the whole month is really expensive. I can't deal with having to buy 1GB of data for R149 when other networks charge you about R99 for the same amount of data. And it never really last's for the whole month because of the workload and time I spend on the Internet doing my work and accessing my school database. #DataMustFall |

| Liza | Xayimpi | | It's bad enough that our universities are crap expensive. But with lower data charges, at least people can take short online courses while the movement is still going for FMF. Let's support educating our citizens. (Not mentioning the fact that we all need data and the internet for assignments and projects. No project nowadays does not need extra research). Viva education! |

It is time data premium prices are reduced. This will ensure that the majority have access to essential information in this modern global village we living in. |

Well I say no more to theft and unreasonable data tarriffs. datamustfall. these companies are manipulating and taking advantage of our dependency to the internet and at the same providing poor services. We pay way more than other users around the continent. This gross manipulations and theft by vodacom, mtn and the likes must end |

| Doctor | Simelane | Mpumalanga | South African data prices are amongst the highest in the world. Seeing that MTN charges more than R200 for 2gigs of data, while MTN powered AFRIHOST charges R99 for the same 2 gigs simply means that our main industry players can do much better. |

One way it to do away with OOB rates. Another is to offer lucrative reseller models so resellers can build out their networks. |

For change to take place on a business, educational and community level people need to talk to each other but not at the exorbitant costs we currently experiencing....There are so many examples of how it impacts the poorest communities in establishing and maintainino relationshipso.  Eg. Parent to School communication |

| Perseus | Drew | Gauteng | I bought 3Gigs of data. The next thing is I'm experiencing bad data network. I only used less than 1 gig because of network that time. The remaining 2 gigs just vanished because the expiry date was due. Why would something like data expire? At least better the service so we utilise all our data in time. All complains just go down the drain at all customer service centers. Particularly @vodacom and MTN. |

Poor communities do suffer the consequences and academic activities need to be research also on internet so poor learners fail as a results this deprive of access to internet. #DataMustDall |

| Mxolisi | Mahlangu | Mpumalanga | The use of internet is very imperative as it helps us interact globally. Through internet we are able to share useful information i.e Job vacancies. The costs incurred when accessing the internet are inevitably too high making it difficult for most of us to use it, thus I support the call for lowering the cost of data. #data_must_fall |

| Brandon | Kristhopher | Gauteng | Need more data as the years progress to do same tasks, the you could do before with less due to computer evolution. Services like BIS is too slow to use efficiently compared to normal data and binds you to a single phone, contracts are cheap yes but you have to pay over a period, and or go into debt and Kay also be blacklisted, we aren't getting anything good happening |

| Anne | Taylor | Western Cape | Our country must have the highest data costs in the world. In China, I did not pay a lot per month for data for what I got. I used Google Maps and translation apps constantly, watched films and never ran out of data – ever. And here you even lose your data if you don't use it up in time. Let's think of the youth and building up our country. We simply can't have a handful of CEOs sitting with a couple of million for overcharging us. #DataMustFall |

| Letlhogonolo | Kgope | Gauteng | As someone who's currently job seeking I must make sure I have I have data because almost everything is via email, I need to check on my emails constantly... And before it even get to that I need to be online to look and apply for a job, and remember this means  I am currently UNEMPLOYED I don't have R150 to buy a gig that finished in 3/4 days when u open links and stuff.. Like no  #DataMustFall... How many people have lost out on opportunities because of not affording Data! |

| Ntando | Ngcobo | | One of the barriers to education and the betterment of South African society is the lack of access to information. The exorbitant prices of data exclude many from the ability to access information and data and thus perpetuate the divisions left by the former regime. This needs to change. |

| Mohlomi Maxwell | Moholi | KwaZulu-Natal | Just like most of consumers, I am battling with keeping up with the costs of data, yet that has become so much of a basic, while service providers are making super profits at the expense of the whole nation. It has become survival of the fittest, where only those that are privileged get a chance to live. If you can't afford to pay for oxygen, you are thrown to the gallows and nobody cares! |

| sizwe | Ntimane | Free State | Data is really expensive, when accessing internet on my phone i have to buy those 1 hour data deals because they are "kind" of cheap to browse internet. but still i need to use my airtime mean while i still have a monthly active data. I was not aware that data was expensive till i found out the comparison with other countries. |

| Tebogo | Mashaba | Limpopo | I spend almost a thousand on data whether am just using social media or doing school research and am just a first year student. This is insane, I can't stay at school for assignments or study till late, I mean I stay far from school and I use a taxi to travel, clearly this is not safe for a girl to walk alone even with peers at night? it is not safe period! Data must fall indeed it is supposed to be cheaper than airtime for goodness sake! |

| Anna-Mari | Pieterse | Gauteng | We the people and consumers of Mzansi are tired of being ripped off by mobile networks. We demand a cut in the cost of data by at least 50% before the 31st December 2017, and for an end to data, airtime and SMS bundles expiring after 30 days. We call on the ICASA, the Portfolio Committee on Telecommunications and Postal Services, the Competition Commission and the National Assembly to force mobile networks to adhere to this demand. |
